From City Clerk Dana Wicher / Posted on: May 9, 2011

The Tour de Cure is a series of fundraising cycling events held in 43 states nationwide to benefit the American Diabetes Association. The Tour is expected to impact Chattahoochee Hills at the following times and locations:

- South Fulton Parkway at Cochran Mill Rd 7:00 a.m. – 10:00 a.m.
- South Fulton Parkway at Campbellton-Redwine 8:30 a.m. – 4:00 p.m.
- Hutcheson Ferry Rd at Watkins Rd 7:00 a.m. – 10:00 a.m.

=====The Next Eventing Competition: May 20-22, 2011

From Maria Hanson, Chatt Hills Marketing/PR/Sponsorship

Chattahoochee Hills invites you to attend their next scheduled competition of eventing May 20 – 22. Dressage will take place Friday and Saturday from 8:30 am 'til 3:45 pm. Don't miss the exhilarating cross-country competition starting Saturday from 9 am until approx. 6:30 pm. Pack a picnic and comfy lawn chairs for Sunday's Show Jumping competition starting at 8:15 am.

The American Eventing Championships are only four months away, giving you plenty of time to make plans to experience this fabulous eventing festival! The AEC will be held for the second year in a row on September 8-11, 2011, at the expansive and picturesque Chattahoochee Hills/Bouckaert Farm's equestrian venue located on the 8000 acre farm of Carl Bouckaert, himself a former Olympic eventer who continues to compete as an upper level rider and is the gracious host of each competition.

Regardless of whether they finish in the ribbons or not, every horse and rider who competes at Chattahoochee Hills/Bouckaert Farm will feel like a champion. The facilities are beautiful and designed from the outset specifically for horses and trailering logistics. The course is fair but challenging enough that both horse and rider learn what they're made of. Ritch Temple, course designer and organizer is also the owner of Broadstone Equine, the official equine insurance provider of the USEA. An "R" USEF-licensed Technical Delegate and FEI-licensed Course Designer, he has designed courses all over the U.S. including the upper level courses at the American Eventing Championships in Wayne, Illinois.

Without the dedication of our volunteers, Chatt Hills Eventing would not exist. For those of you that have been part of the "Chatt Family" of volunteers in the past, we look forward to seeing you again, and for those that would like to sign up for this year's Events, we welcome you with open arms. To volunteer for this May's competition, and for more information regarding volunteering, please contact: chattvolunteers@aol.com

Chattahoochee Hills is proud to announce Land Rover as the Official Automotive Sponsor of the Nutrena/USEA American Eventing Championships. "After partnering with us in our inaugural year as the AEC host site, not only has Land Rover agreed to work with Chatt Hills for another two years, we're thrilled that they were so pleased with last year's event that they have increased their level of support," said Event Director, Ritch Temple. "It's exciting that a company of this caliber, one which is such an important player in sports across the globe, sees the AEC as an important part of its future."

Suncoast Bedding, our latest sponsor for the 2011 USEA American Eventing Championships, offers only premium quality pure pine shavings horse bedding for maximum cushioning and excellent absorbency. Sterile and essentially dust-free, their fresh, natural pine is ideal for your horse and easier on your budget than many alternative bedding materials. Suncoast's manufactured Pine Shavings are made from 100% organic pine wood shavings that are high heat dried and screened multiple times to remove dust. Dever, Inc. is proud to be the official golf car supplier for ALL of the Chattahoochee Hills Events...including this year's American Eventing Championships.

Interested in sponsorship of the Chattahoochee Hills/USEA's American Eventing Championships? We are always looking to partner with businesses to help promote the AEC. AEC competitors have always enjoyed the fabulous prizes and cash provided by our generous sponsors - come join the party and find out what Chatt Hills/USEA can do for you! Chatt Hills Marketing/PR/Sponsorship Move over drivers.

Maria Hanson asked me to pass along this article by Ty Tagami of the Atlanta Journal-Constitution

That's the message of bicycling legislation signed into law Wednesday by Gov. Nathan Deal. The bill, which the governor inked at a 4:30 p.m. ceremony, requires drivers to scoot over at least three feet when passing cyclists. Advocates expect it to generate frustration among motorists who don't like encountering slower-moving bikes, but say it will help the majority understand how to navigate safely when encountering riders.

"Some motorists believe that bikes shouldn't be on the road, but by law we're a vehicle just like any vehicle on the road," said Eric Broadwell, a Roswell cyclist and the president of Georgia Bikes!, a statewide advocacy group. The law will also help sympathetic drivers, he said. "Even my wife is nervous when she sees a rider. She doesn't know what to do, and I have to coach her along."

House Bill 101 will clarify things. Prior to its adoption, state law required only that drivers leave a "safe distance" between their vehicle and bikes. Broadwell said the new law basically means motorists must cross the yellow line -- when the oncoming lane is clear, of course -- to pass legally.

The legislation, sponsored by Rep. Doug McKillip, an Athens Republican, originally did not include the distance requirement. Instead, it focused on other cycling minutiae, such as a requirement for rear reflectors (cyclists can now substitute a red light) and the requirement that cyclists ride no more than two abreast (they can now exceed two at certain permitted events).

Then, at the end of the legislative session, Sen. John Albers, a Roswell Republican, tacked on the 3-foot requirement. The firefighter and recreational cyclist said he was inspired by testimony from Kathy Serrano, the widow of cyclist Tony Serrano who was killed in 2004 by a car in Gwinnett County.

Albers was also concerned about the safety of his two children, ages 15 and 8. "Roswell is a very bicycle-friendly community," he said, "but it's dangerous out there." Albers said his main goal was getting a law on the books as an educational tool so that drivers, over time, would learn to give cyclists wide berth.

Violation is a misdemeanor punishable by fines and jail time. And, advocates say, the 3-foot limit will be relevant in lawsuits stemming from collisions where the old "safe distance" requirement was vague about liability.

Georgia is joining at least 19 other states with 3-foot passing laws, according to the League of American Bicyclists. Karen Morgan, a spokeswoman for AAA, said the automobile advocacy group supports such laws and tries to educate drivers about cyclists.

Serrano said the new law will save lives. Her husband was flung 150 feet up the road when the man driving a car rear-ended him. "He hit him with the right, front headlight," she said, "so obviously three feet wasn't given."
